BALANCE DUE

The minute never comes when any of us can say, "I've done enough." Until the end of the war—and for years thereafter—there'll be an unpaid balance due the men who are winning Victory for us today.

We here in Jeanerette know that we will never be able to pay that balance, but we assure our young men and women of Jeanerette and the vicinity that we will try our utmost to pay installments on that balance when they return. It is our sincere wish that their return may be shortened not by years, months, or days, but by hours and minutes.
